

The Web's most sought-after new domain name is...

CNNMoney 7 comments

By David Goldman @CNNMoneyTech June 13, 2012: 2:29 PM ET

Recommend 23 Tweet 3 Share 1 +1 5 Email Print

NEW YORK (CNNMoney) – The Internet's domain system will soon grow astronomically to include .lol, .apple and .golf, but those weren't the most sought-after prizes.

Thirteen applicants filed for .app, and 11 filed for .home and .inc, according to the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN), the nonprofit organization that manages top-level domains – the ".com" part of website addresses. ICANN announced the 1,930 proposals on Wednesday for the soon-to-be-expanded top-level domain system.

Ads by Google: MBA Without Bachelor, Online MBA in 18 months from Top British University - free catalogue, college.ch

Right behind .home and .inc was .art with 10 applications. The domains .blog, .book, .shop and .llc drew nine each, and .design, .movie and .music each attracted eight applicants.

When ICANN receives more than one application for a top-level domain, the applicants can try to negotiate between themselves and come to an agreement – one that will probably involve cash. Otherwise, the name goes to auction, which could set the winning bidder back millions, according to those following the process.

Some of the bidding wars are going to pit tech titans against one another. Archivals Microsoft and Google both applied for .docs and .live.

But the biggest battle will be between Google and Amazon, which both want a whopping 20 of the same domains, including .book, .buy, .dev, .drive, .free, .game, .mail, .map, .movie, .music, .play, .search, .shop, .show, .spot, .store, .talk, .wow, .you, and .cloud. That last one is also being pursued by security giant Symantec.

Google (GOOG, Fortune 500) and Amazon (AMZN, Fortune 500) were among the largest applicants, with 102 and 76 names applied for, respectively. Microsoft (MSFT, Fortune 500) applied for 11, Wal-Mart (WMT, Fortune 500) applied for six, and Apple (AAPL, Fortune 500) applied for just one: .apple.

Related story: What happens next in the domain expansion

The top applicants weren't companies you've heard of – they're new businesses set up specifically to take advantage of this event. Companies like Top Level Domain Holdings, which applied for 70 top-level domain names, and United TLD, which applied for 26, are hoping to accumulate names to sell to Internet registrars like GoDaddy.

Many of their sought-after names were common English words, but others included the .com and .org suffixes in other languages, such as Arabic, Japanese, Chinese and Hebrew, among many others.

But the most-active applicant by far was Donuts Inc., which applied for a stunning 307 top-level domain names.

Donuts, a Web registry founded in 2011, has raised more than $100 million from investors, a stash the company plans on dipping into to fund its bidding on contested names.

In addition to a wacky list that includes .wtf, .sucks and .pizza, Donuts applied for dozens of names that are contested by big companies with deep pockets, like Google and Amazon.

Still, Donuts' executives say they're excited to head into the fray.

"Our initial reaction is one of tremendous satisfaction, as we have a bunch of uncontested names," said Daniel Schindler, one of Donuts' four co-founders.

Donuts has already priced out what it thinks each domain it applied for is worth. It plans to bid up to that amount when the auctioning starts.

"We've got the resources to ensure we win those contention sets when they're worth it," Schindler said.

Sorting out all those logistics is going to take months, at a minimum. ICANN expects the first new domains to actually go live in "early" 2013; applicants say April or May seems like the soonest possible target.

– CNNMoney staff writer Julianne Pepitone contributed reporting to this article

First Published: June 13, 2012: 10:51 AM ET Share

Ads by Google: MBA Without Bachelor, Online MBA in 18 months from Top British University - free catalogue, college.ch

Recommend 23 Tweet 3 Share 1 +1 5 Email Print

Recommended for You

Facebook's stock plunge is a day trader's paradise

Verizon kills voice minutes, makes data shareable

Here comes .NETFLIX: New Web domain applications revealed

Secrets of an extreme couponer

Around the Web

Is Time Running Out for Those Who Want to Refinance?

The dwindling wealth of the American family: By the numbers

As Facebook grows, millions say, 'no, thanks'

Join the Conversation (7 comments)

Sort by Newest first Subscribe by RSS

Login below to leave a comment

CNNMoney DISQUS Connect Twitter OpenID

Chris Deck, 35 minutes ago

It'd help to get the facts right for this article:

APP was the top draw with 13 companies applying, with BLOG also making coming in tied for fifth with 9 companies applying.

Importing the list posted elsewhere on this site into Excel provided a simple list of the top requests...

- APP 13, HOME 11, INC 11, ART 10, BLOG 9, BOOK 9, LLC 9, SHOP 9, DESIGN 8, MOVIE 8, MUSIC 8, CLOUD 7, HOTEL 7, LOVE 7, LTD 7, MAIL 7, NEWS 7, STORE 7, WEB 7

LIKE FLAG

GothamExtremist, 37 minutes ago

I am going to register:

if you click on this link you will be sending $1 to my bank account. get rich quick

LIKE FLAG

WKOPI.PL: Fotka strony internetowej wykonana 13.06.2012 20:59:49 CEST  Uwieczniamy strony internetowe, NA ZAWSZE. ***

... the bigger question is how is ICANN a non-profit? What services do they provide and what are they doing with the money?

1 person liked this. LIKE FLAG

John Cram, 58 minutes ago

I landed on this page after typing in worthless.news

3 people liked this. LIKE FLAG

MLBuck, Today 01:45 PM

I would register .dot

1 person liked this. LIKE FLAG

lightfoot27, Today 11:49 AM

And who says you can't print money on the Internet. Just have a lock on "domain names" and sell more of them as you need cash.

shakes head

Joseph Poland and 4 more liked this. LIKE FLAG

Minnesota_on_my_mind, Today 12:27 PM in reply to lightfoot27

Prices are set by supply and demand. What I like about this process is that those TLDs in most demand will cost the most after auction.

LIKE FLAG

Most Popular

- Wal-Mart expands foreign corruption probe 8
Dimon: 'I can't publicly defend the trade' 361
Here comes .NETFLIX: New Web domain applications revealed 59
The Web's most sought-after new domain name is... 7
4 things to know about the new MacBook Pro 6

Tech Blogs

- APPLE 2.0
Tim Cook feels the wrath of the Apple power user
TECH TUMBLR
What is 'Knob Town' and why did it apply for a top-level domain?
BIG TECH
RIM: What the hell happened?
TODAY IN TECH
Today in Tech: Why Microsoft feels "cool" again

Tech Jobs

Job search form with fields for job title or company, location, and a Search button. Results include Graphic Designer jobs, Project Management jobs, Engineering jobs, Technical Writer jobs, Software jobs, and Product Management jobs.

Hot List

- Dimon: 'I can't publicly defend the trade'
Dimon says he wasn't aware of extent of the loss when he called it 'tempest in a teapot' More
Here comes .APPLE, .WEB and more
First look at list of proposed new Web domains, ahead of biggest expansion ever More
Student loan payback gets White House attention
With little progress extending low rates past July 1, White House wants to make it easier for college grads to enroll in program that lowers monthly payments More
Stocks may have hit bottom
Experts are optimistic the market will emerge from its lows to end the year with solid gains. More
5 myths of the great financial meltdown
Five years after the U.S. economy teetered on collapse, here are five reasons why we need to stop pointing fingers and fix the problems that nearly sank us. More